The fish law, we are told, is being violated by certain men who have note in Crooked river. We see fish in the market here frequently which have the appearance to conthe Missouri river, and which are not caught with hooks and lines. The fish comm is doing everything in its power to re-stock our Missouri waters, but it cannot succeed if poachers are to occupy the outlet of streams and catch every fish that attempts to pass up or down. How frequently does one hear some (per haps strange) lady say of another, "She was once full of fun?" The melancholy saying comes to one's ears in cars, boats, stores and pariors-"She was once full of fun." If one has any sentiment, the words are sadden ing. What was she when she was full of fun and what sombre, forlorn, perhaps broken creature is she now, that she has no fun or was she a little too funny for her own good, and is she a sedate and majestic lady now? Why not keep on being full of fun! We have but one earthly life to live, and why not make it a cheerful one, full of love and laughter? The business men of Lexington should wake up and do something to invite the fall trade to come here. The merchants in the surrounding towns are up and doing. All round us they naturally and legitimately cut off trade that was once tributary to this city. The only way to attract it is to advertis superior inducements, either in prices, varie y or quality, or m all three. Mowadays people go where they are invited, and the mer chants here must advertise, and that heavily to draw trade from a distance. If they intend to make an effort for the fall trade they have no tire to lose. In advertising, it is always well to be a little in advance of th
